Collective Worker Action in the Tech Industry

A look at both the history of collective actions taken by workers in the tech industry and the current state of the movement. There has actually been a long history of organization among tech workers. And, in the last few years, there has been a groundswell of worker organizing in many of the largest tech companies including Amazon, Microsoft, and Google. What are the strategies that have been taken by the movement to build worker power and how successful have they been? What is different and unique about organizing workers in the tech industry? Come find out! Our speakers include Sarvesh Rajasekaran, a worker in the tech industry for over a decade and a community organizer for Bernie 2020 .
